From 19 May 2021 through 25 July 2021 the Hayward Gallery presents Matthew Barney: Redoubt, an exhibition of the renowned artist and filmmaker's latest body of work. The exhibition, the artist's first major museum show in the UK in over a decade, presents a group of monumental sculptures and more than forty engravings and electroplated copper plates. The exhibition also features the artist's first outdoor sculpture, Sawtooth Battery, 2019, which stands over ten metres tall on one of the gallery's terraces. Also included is the UK premiere of Barney's new eponymous film, a 'breathtakingly beautiful' chronicle that explores the complex relationships between humans, and the natural world. Set in the sublime wintry landscape of Idaho's Sawtooth Mountain range, the feature-length film intertwines themes of cosmology, ecology and artistic creation in a contemporary reworking of the classical myth of Diana and Actaeon.

Redoubt presents a major new direction in Barney's practice, and advances his notable shift in materials over the past decade. With Redoubt, Barney combines innovative casting methods and digital technologies in an unprecedented way to create artworks of formal and material complexity as well as narrative density. The six large-scale sculptures in the exhibition derive from trees harvested from a burned forest in the Sawtooth Mountains. Formed out of molten copper and brass, the unique casts incorporate enlarged militarised elements. Partly transformed into artillery batteries and rifles, the sculptures have a hybridised aesthetic that is both imposing and intricate. Cosmic Hunt, 2020, a striking stainless-steel sculpture, is Barney's most recent addition to this body of work, and encapsulates the idea of cosmological transformation that occurs at the end of the film.

The exhibition also includes engravings on copper plates that Barney made during the filming of Redoubt as well as a series of electroplated copper reliefs that feature imagery from the film, such as the landscape of the Sawtooth Mountains or a wolf among the trees. The electroplates were made using a technique that Barney developed during production of the film, which he then refined and expanded in the studio. By altering the conditions in the electroplating tank—including current, heat, and chemical concentrations—the artist produced unique variations on each image. The engravings also feature elaborate frames and armatures, making them sculptural works in their own rights. Redoubt was filmed during the winter of 2016-17 in Idaho's rugged Sawtooth Mountains and continues Barney's long standing preoccupation with landscape as both a setting and subject in his films. By layering classical, cosmological, and American myths about humanity's place in the natural world as well as political currents at play, Redoubt weaves a lyrical and universal narrative.

The exhibition is supported by Sadie Coles HQ, London; Gladstone Gallery, New York and Brussels; Cockayne - Grants for the Arts and the London Community Foundation; MUBI; J&M Donnelly; and Regen Projects, Los Angeles.

Igshaan Adams: Kicking Dust

From 19 May 2021 through 25 July 2021, the Hayward Gallery presents the first solo exhibition in the UK of South African artist Igshaan Adams. The 2018 winner of the prestigious Standard Bank Young Artist Award, Igshaan Adams lives and works in Cape Town. The artist's cross-disciplinary practice combines aspects of weaving, sculpture and installation whilst exploring concerns related to race, religion and sexuality.

The exhibition consists largely of new work produced during an artist residency Adams undertook at the A4 Arts Foundation in Cape Town and on the occasion of the show. Presented as a single immersive environment with suspended sculptures, large-scale floor-based weavings and tapestries hung on the wall, the installation responds to the Hayward Gallery's iconic Brutalist gallery space. Each work, and the exhibition as a whole, is composed of multiple patterns that explore the potential of woven material to reflect not only the multiplicities of Adams' own identity but of broader cultural interchange.

The title Kicking Dust references the 'Indigenous Riel' dance of the Northern Cape which Adams witnessed as a child. Described as 'dancing in the dust', the riel is thought to be one of the oldest indigenous dancing styles in southern Africa. Throughout the exhibition, cloud-like sculptures made of spiralled wire and beads are suspended from the gallery's ceiling resonating with the image of dust erupting from the earth as dancers kick the ground.

Building on this sense of movement and of journeying, visitors will encounter pathways through the gallery created by the placement of weavings on the floor. Resembling tectonic forms like the nature of the weave itself, the pathways evoke 'desire lines,' paths that pedestrians take intuitively rather than set routes. These are mapped by the artist from actual 'desire lines' that residents have walked over repeatedly on the border of Cape Town's Bonteheuwel and Langa, despite a preconceived history of racial and religious hostility between the different communities.

When creating his work, Adams often collaborates with women who have settled in the Cape Town area and have had traditional textile skills passed down through generations. This process of collaboration is integral to his practice. The oral histories, folklore and personal stories that his collaborators share in the studio as they work often end up informing the artworks themselves.

The exhibition is supported by Wendy Fisher & A4 Arts Foundation, LOEWE FOUNDATION and The African Arts Trust.

Salman Toor

Music Room, 2021

Hayward Gallery Billboard

From 17 May, the Hayward Gallery Billboard features Music Room by artist Salman Toor. The billboard is installed on the side of London's Queen Elizabeth Hall, which faces the gallery.

Music Room (2021) depicts a social gathering where groups of figures dance, hang out, and seem to melt into the floor under the influence of music. Toor's painting combines references to European art history and the legacy of colonialism to create an allegory for encounters between cultures. Originally from Pakistan, the artist now lives in New York, and much of his work blends fiction and autobiography to express his experiences as a queer, Brown man moving through the modern city. He describes Music Room as an 'oasis', where his characters meet and share understandings through music.

Music Room celebrates the freedom, empathy and joy of being physically together to witness art.

Salman Toor (b. 1983, Lahore, Pakistan) lives and works in New York, USA.

About the Hayward Gallery

The Hayward Gallery, part of the Southbank Centre, has a long history of presenting work by the world's most adventurous and innovative artists including major solo shows by both emerging and established artists and dynamic group exhibitions. They include those by Bridget Riley, Martin Creed, Antony Gormley, Tracey Emin, Andy Warhol, Ed Ruscha, Jeremy Deller, Anish Kapoor, René Magritte, Francis Bacon and David Shrigley, as well as influential group exhibitions such as Africa Remix, Light Show, Psycho Buildings and Space Shifters. Opened by Her Majesty, The Queen in July 1968, the gallery is one of the few remaining buildings of its style. The Brutalist building was designed by a group of young architects, including Dennis Crompton, Warren Chalk and Ron Herron and is named after Sir Isaac Hayward, a former leader of the London County Council.

About the Southbank Centre

The Southbank Centre is the UK's largest arts centre and one of the UK's top five visitor attractions, occupying a prominent riverside location that sits in the midst of London's most vibrant cultural quarter on the South Bank of the Thames. We exist to present great cultural experiences that bring people together and we achieve this by providing the space for artists to create and present their best work and by creating a place where as many people as possible can come together to experience bold, unusual and eye-opening work. We want to take people out of the everyday, every day.

The site has an extraordinary creative and architectural history stretching back to the 1951 Festival of Britain. The Southbank Centre is made up of the Royal Festival Hall, Queen Elizabeth Hall, Purcell Room and Hayward Gallery as well as being home to the National Poetry Library and the Arts Council Collection. It is also home to four Resident Orchestras (London Philharmonic Orchestra, Philharmonia Orchestra, London Sinfonietta and Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment) and four Associate Orchestras (Aurora Orchestra, BBC Concert Orchestra, Chineke! Orchestra and National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain).
